Frequently Asked Questions

Is this 7 Days Tanzania Honeymoon Safari with Ndutu Migration good for couples?

Yes. The itinerary works well for honeymooners because it combines excellent wildlife viewing with comfortable tented camps and a slower relaxing day in Serengeti. It gives couples time for photography, quiet moments in nature, and a less rushed safari pace.

When is the best time for this Ndutu migration safari?

The best time is usually December to March, when the Great Migration is often around Ndutu and the southern Serengeti plains. This period is famous for calving season, when wildebeest give birth and predators become very active.

Can Serengeti Wild Tours guarantee migration sightings in Ndutu?

No responsible safari company can guarantee exact migration sightings because wildebeest movement depends on rain, grass, and natural conditions. However, December to March gives you one of the strongest chances to see herds, calving activity, and predators in the Ndutu area.

What makes Ndutu special compared with Central Serengeti?

Ndutu is a seasonal migration and calving area located around the southern Serengeti and Ngorongoro Conservation Area. It is especially good for wildebeest, zebra, cheetah, lion, hyena, and wide open plains during the green season. Central Serengeti is stronger for year-round big cat viewing.

Is the relaxing day in Serengeti a full game drive day?

The relaxing day is intentionally lighter. It gives couples time to enjoy the camp, the pool, the scenery, and the sounds of the bush. A gentle game drive can still be arranged depending on your preference, but the main purpose is comfort and balance.

Is a hot air balloon safari included?

No. The hot air balloon safari in Ndutu is optional and comes at extra cost. It can be added for couples who want a special sunrise experience followed by a bush breakfast.

What should couples pack for this safari?

Pack light neutral-colored clothing, comfortable shoes, sunscreen, a hat, sunglasses, insect repellent, camera gear, personal medication, and a light jacket for cool mornings and evenings. Soft-sided luggage is easier to manage on safari.
